FOG HAMPER HUNT FOR SHIP

Belief That Captain, Crew of 20 Drowned When Ship Sunk Rises.

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 19.—Hampered by dense fog and heavy seas, United States coast guard cutter and power boat today continued to patrol the desolate Oregon Coast in search of the missing crew of 20 men aboard the steam schooner South Coast, believed to have sunk off Cape Blanco.

Faint hope persisted that all or some of the men may have made their way to some forsaken spot on the southern Oregon or northern California shore and have not yet been able to communicate with civilization. There was also a possibility that Captain Stanley Sorrenson and some of his men may still be adrift in the South Coast's one remaining life-boat.

The vessel carried two life boats one of which, empty, was found at sea. Discovery of the empty life boat and sighting of the South Coast's deck house and part of her cargo afloat gave first indications of disaster.

Hobbs, Wall and Company, owners of the South Coast, announced that an airplane would leave Crescent City, Cal., today and fly over the ship's route in an effort to locate either the vessel or the crew.

The coast guard cutters Cabokia and Red Wing were maintaining a vigilant patrol between the mouth of the Rogue River and Coos Bay, where the South Coast was due to arrive last Wednesday. Power boats from Coos Bay and Quillay were also skirting the shoreline.

DR. A. L. STUMP, HEALTH CHIEF, MAKES REPORT

Reviews Health Condition of Pickaway-Co During Month of August

SURVEYS STORES

Scarlet Fever and Infantile Paralysis Reviewed.

One quarantine for Infantile Paralysis has been enforced this month, and this particular quarantine and two others have been released. The two of the last months enactment were real cases of this disease, though the infection was not communicated to other members of the family, probably because of the prompt isolation of the patients, and the enforced fresh air and sunshine that the prevailing hot weather heaped upon them. The third case returned to normal health in two days, though kept in quarantine the regulation period.

Two new cases of Typhoid Fever have been reported this month, and the only surprise is that there are but six cases in the county. Samples of water from many private wells and all school wells in the county have been collected and forwarded to the state laboratory for examination. About one third of those examined are pronounced satisfactory.

In company with Mr. Martin of the state dairy and food department we have visited and inspected Food handlers, Groceries, Bakeries, Confectioneries, Meat Markets, Cream Stations, Milk Producers, Dairies and Restaurants. These visits have extended over a period of several days. Twenty-five orders were issued to remedy unsanitary conditions found on our visit; and this was reduced to nine when our second visit was made. Orders were given merchants to keep their places of business clean, which included rooms, cellars, refrigerators, the premises and their own personal appearances.

Gas stations that were found handling candies, soft drinks and ice cream were ordered to keep food and beverages entirely away from oils and greases, and some have been required to build tight partitions between, to prevent odors being absorbed by the foods.

EIGHT SENATE SEATS MAY BE WON BY WETS

More Clean-cut Prohibition Fights This Year Than Ever Before.

WETS TO GAIN

Morrow Leads Array of Affirmed Wet Candidates.

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—The extent to which the sharp knife of prohibition has cut across political lines and buried itself deep in the vitals of both major parties was revealed here today when, with primaries and nominating conventions virtually concluded, leaders estimated that no less than eight senate seats and approximately 50 house seats probably will be decided in November on the basis of the wet-and-dry issue alone.

This is by far the greatest number of clean-cut prohibition fights that any election has witnessed since the adoption of the 18th amendment. It is eloquent testimony, too, to the growing popular concern over prohibition.

With both parties split on the issue, the survey made since the conclusion of the primaries reveals that, generally speaking, it has been the Democrats who have been boldest about grabbing the wet end of the prohibition stick.

This is particularly true of the senatorial contests. Of the eight listed wherein prohibition is accounted the chief or deciding issue, the Democrats are wet in six and dry in two. In Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Massachusetts, Delaware, and Rhode Island, the Democratic aspirants are opposed to prohibition.

In Montana and Colorado, the Democrats are rated dry, although Walsh in Montana has modified his stand to say he will be guided by the wishes of his constituents.

MORROW AVOWED
Only three Republican senatorial candidates are considered openly and avowedly against prohibition—Morrow in New Jersey, Shaw in Colorado, and Galen in Montana. There are some others, however, like Davis in Pennsylvania, and Couzens in Michigan, who might be considered on the border-line. Neither has taken a very positive stand on the issue.

The Association Against Prohibition Amendment, organized and financed on a permanent basis after the 1928 election, "points with pride" to the fomenting of so many clean-cut contests in the forthcoming elections.

The Association, non-political or rather bi-partisan, has modeled its efforts somewhat after those of its dry rival, the Anti-Saloon League, by going out into congressional districts and state contests and encouraging wet candidates to oppose dries.

It has been the League's boast for years that it made it "politically unsafe to be wet." The Association, proceeding on the same line, is endeavoring to make it equally as politically unsafe to be dry.

In the primary campaigns just ended it has without exception supported the wet candidate irrespective of party.

It will do so in the approaching election in November. Where both candidates are wet, as in the New Jersey senate contest, and in many congressional districts in the East, the Association keeps hands off, as has been the policy of the League.

DO-X, Giant Plane, To Be Tested For Ocean Trip

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany, Sept. 19.—The giant German airplane DO-X will undergo extensive trial flights next week with a view to reaching a definite decision on her projected cruise to America, it was announced here today.

Refuting reports published in the United States that the trans-Atlantic hop of the passenger liner had been postponed until next year, Maurice Dornier informed International News Service that the results of next week's trial flights alone will determine whether or not the DO-X will cross the ocean this year.

"We have all of October in which to get ready for the attempt," Dornier said. "We can go over even later by merely changing our route."

The take-off for America has been postponed several times because of unsatisfactory performance by the motors, which are of American make.

The plane has undergone numerous tests at its base at Altenheim, Switzerland. At one time it carried 165 persons aloft as easily as it carries a dozen. However, on its first trip across the Atlantic it is to have a passenger list of only 25 selected persons, in addition to its crew.

RUMORED COUP BY SOCIALISTS CAUSES ALARM

Economic Party, Minor Organization, Throws Strength To Fascists.

CONTROL POLICE

Party In Power Continues To Gain Strength.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Official assurances from every conceivable source that a Fascist "putsch" was "ridiculous and impossible" apparently fell upon deaf ears today as rumors of a projected coup d'etat by the national Socialist party caused widespread alarm throughout the country.

Stocks slumped another four points on the Berlin Bourse after dropping heavily when first allegations of the "putsch" were published yesterday. Efforts by the government to stem the tide of rumors and reports by a series of flat denials seemed to have failed, temporarily at least.

The Fascist cause was given an additional impetus today when the Economic party, one of the smaller parliamentary bodies in the Reichstag, announced it had joined with the national Socialists in their demand for dissolution of the Prussian diet and the holding of new elections.

Behind this demand on the part of the Fascists is a desire to control the Prussian police, the key to which lies in the hands of the Prussian authorities. Control in line with the Fascist plan, Wilhelmshagen, it was learned, International News Service, the government is "watching" the situation.

Though it professes to demand ports of Adolf Hitler, the so-called "Führer" of Germany is laying detailed plans to seize the government.

WANT PARADE
The Fascists put forward another demand today which they put their newfound power to the test. They insist the government remove the prohibition placed upon a scheduled parade of 6,000 national Socialists in Potsdam on September 28. The parade was to be reviewed by Dr. Hitler and a number of deposed royalties, including Prince August Wilhelm, fourth son of the ex-Kaiser, the Duke of Coburg-Gotha, Prince Franz von Thurn and Taxis and the Princess of Reuss. General Lietzmann, Von Epp, Von Liebowitz, Von Frankenstein and Colonel Hiri, all members of the military staff, also were to have been in the reviewing stand. All are members of the national Socialist party.

Members of the association of German industrialists, many of whom supported Dr. Hitler's party, declared themselves stunned at the party's growth when the organization met in annual conference today.

Developments, it was said, depend upon whether the movement is primarily national socialist or revolutionary, indicating they would not condone violent overthrow of the present regime. In spite of Hitler's victory, the association is said to have received numerous credit offers from America, including one loan of $150,000,000.

SECOND MAN FACES CHAIR

Kenneth McCartney, 27, Mansfield, Sentenced To Die For Murder of Wilcox.

BUCYRUS, O., Sept. 19.—The state today avenged for the second time the murder of Ralph Wilcox, young filling station operator of Galion, who was fatally shot the night of June 27 during an attempted hold-up and robbery.

After deliberating only an hour and one-half, a jury of 10 men and two women late yesterday returned a verdict of guilty of first-degree murder without recommendation for mercy in the case of Kenneth McCartney, 27, of Mansfield. The verdict carries with it a mandatory sentence of death in the electric chair.

McCartney is the second man to be convicted for the slaying of Wilcox. Fred Massa was tried and convicted last week. He was sentenced to die in the electric chair next January 2 and is now confined to a cell in "death row" at Ohio penitentiary. Columbus Earl Sites, the other member of the notorious bandit trio, will go on trial next week.

McCartney's attorney refused to place a single witness on the stand and rested the case.

The trio was arrested several weeks after the shooting of Wilcox on statutory charges in connection with the kidnapping of a Mansfield woman. They were sentenced to serve 20 years each in the penitentiary. They were later released to Crawford county authorities to stand trial for the murder of Wilcox.

Only three Republican senatorial candidates are considered openly and avowedly against prohibition—Morrow in New Jersey, Shaw in Colorado, and Galen in Montana.

There are some others, however, like Davis in Pennsylvania, and Couzens in Michigan, who might be considered on the border-line. Neither has taken a very positive stand on the issue.

The Association Against Prohibition Amendment, organized and financed on a permanent basis after the 1928 election, "points with pride" to the fomenting of so many clean-cut contests in the forthcoming elections.

The Association, non-political or rather bi-partisan, has modeled its efforts somewhat after those of its dry rival, the Anti-Saloon League, by going out into congressional districts and state contests and encouraging wet candidates to oppose dries.

It has been the League's boast for years that it made it "politically unsafe to be wet." The Association, proceeding on the same line, is endeavoring to make it equally as politically unsafe to be dry.

In the primary campaigns just ended it has without exception supported the wet candidate irrespective of party.

It will do so in the approaching election in November. Where both candidates are wet, as in the New Jersey senate contest, and in many congressional districts in the East, the Association keeps hands off, as has been the policy of the League.

DO-X, Giant Plane, To Be Tested For Ocean Trip

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Germany Sept. 19.—The giant German airplane DO-X will undergo extensive trial flights next week with a view to reaching a definite decision on her projected cruise to America, it was announced here today.

Refuting reports published in the United States that the trans-Atlantic hop of the passenger liner had been postponed until next year, Maurice Dornier informed International News Service that the results of next week's trial flights alone will determine whether or not the DO-X will cross the ocean this year.

SECOND MAN FACES CHAIR

Kenneth McCartney, 27, Mansfield, Sentenced To Die For Murder of Wilcox.

BUYRUS, O., Sept. 19.—The state today avenged for the second time the murder of Ralph Wilcox, young filling station operator of Gallion, who was fatally shot the night of June 27 during an attempted hold-up and robbery.

After deliberating only an hour and one-half, a jury of 10 men and two women late yesterday returned a verdict of guilty of first-degree murder without recommendation for mercy in the case of Kenneth McCartney, 27, of Mansfield. The verdict carries with it a mandatory sentence of death in the electric chair.

McCartney is the second man to be convicted for the slaying of Wilcox. Fred Massa was tried and convicted last week. He was sentenced to die in the electric chair next January 2 and is now confined to a cell in "death row" at Ohio penitentiary, Columbus.

Earl Sites, the other member of the notorious bandit trio, will go on trial next week.

McCartney's attorney refused to place a single witness on the stand and rested the case.

The trio was arrested several weeks after the shooting of Wilcox on statutory charges in connection with the kidnaping of a Mansfield woman. They were sentenced to serve 20 years each in the penitentiary. They were later released to Crawford county authorities to stand trial for the murder of Wilcox.

RUMORED COUP BY SOCIALIST CAUSES ALARM

Economic Party, Minor Organization, Throws Strength To Fascists.

CONTROL POLICE

Party In Power Continues To Gain Strength.

BERLIN, Sept. 19.—Official assurances from every conceivable source that a Fascist "push" was "ridiculous and impossible" apparently fell upon deaf ears today as rumors of a projected coup d'etat by the national Socialist party caused widespread alarm throughout the country.

Stocks slumped another ten points on the Berlin Bourse after dropping heavily when first allegations of the "putsch" were published yesterday. Efforts by the government to stem the tide of rumors and reports by a series of flat denials seemed to have failed, temporarily at least.

The Fascist cause was given an additional impetus today when the Economic party, one of the smaller parliamentary bodies in the Reichstag, announced it had joined with the national Socialists in their demand for dissolution of the Prussian diet and the holding of new elections.

Behind this demand on the part of the Fascists is seen a desire to control the German police, the key to which lies in the hands of the Prussian authorities. Control of the police, it is alleged, would be in line with the Fascist plan for Wilhelmstrasse it was learned. International News Service told the government is pursuing "watchful waiting" policy, though it professes to disbelieve reports Dr. Adolf Hitler, the so-called "Mussolini of Germany" is laying detailed plans to seize the government.

WANT PARADE

The Fascists put forward another demand today which may put their newfound power to the test. They insist the government remove the prohibition placed upon a scheduled parade of 6,000 national Socialists in Potsdam on September 28. The parade was to be reviewed by Dr. Hitler and a number of deposed royalties, including Prince August Wilhelm, fourth son of the ex-Kaiser, the Duke of Coburg-Gotha, Prince Franz Von Thurn und Taxis and the Princess of Reuss. Generals Lietzmann, Von Epp, Von Liebert, Von Frankenstein and Colonel Hiri, all members of the military staff, also were to have been in the reviewing stand. All are members of the national Socialist party.

Members of the association of German industrialists, many of whom supported Dr. Hitler's party, declared themselves stunned at the party's growth when the organization met in annual conference today.

Developments, it was said, depended upon whether the movement is primarily national socialist or revolutionary, indicating they would not condone violent overthrow of the present regime. In spite of Hitler's victory, the association is said to have received numerous credit offers from America, including one loan of $150,000,000.

EMPLOY GAS TO ARREST NEGRO

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—Police today were holding Fred Thomas, 38, negro, of Berkeley, Va., who late yesterday barricaded himself in the basement of a south side home here after an attempted robbery, and held off police for nearly an hour. He was finally routed with tear-gas bombs and by a machine gun police squad.

The negro's robbery attempt was frustrated by several pedestrians who attempted to capture him. He escaped and after a chase through several streets, entered the home of Carl Skinner and hid in the basement where he held off police and a large crowd.

FIRE-BUG HELD

PORTSMOUTH, O., Sept. 19.—Herbert Marsh, 22, of Lucasville, near here, awaited grand jury action today after he had confessed to police that he set fire to the Stanley theatre at Sciotoville, last Sunday. Marsh, who operated the theatre, started the fire, police said, in order to collect $15,000 insurance.

Miniature Golf Is Big Business

BY ROBERT S. THORNBERG.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. — There is a miniature golf course to each 5,000 population, probably 2,500,000 persons play the game daily and the annual income derived from this new form of sport is approximately $228,000,000, according to private commercial experts here today.

With $125,000,000 already invested in course equipment and $200,000,000 worth of real estate in use for this purpose, miniature golf has taken a real place in the nation's business picture. Officials believed that there is a six per cent return on the real estate in use, or an income of $12,000,000 to property owners from that source.

Before the end of the year it was anticipated that there would be an increase of at least 10 per cent in miniature golf courses and their employment as a means of recreation and amusement. Miniature golf was described as the country's most rapidly growing industry.

It has assumed importance in the unemployment problem, experts estimating that about 100,000 persons work daily to keep the golf courses in operation. Furthermore, miniature golf, because of the large amount of materials necessary to its maintenance is having an effect in stimulating from 12 to 15 different industries.

Experts said that the canvassing business, for instance, probably is enjoying an output of from 5 to 10 percent over normal as the result of the increasing practice of placing awnings over the courses and in the use of canvases in sports related to golf.

Among the related games is one devoted exclusively to driving. At a certain distance from the tees from which driving is done as placed a large "canvass" backdrop marked off so that the value of shots if made in the ordinary game of golf, may be estimated.

A new development, with the approach of cold weather, is the establishment of indoor courses which will take up much unwanted property. Indoor courses are being built chiefly in the north so that devotees of the game may pursue their sport during the winter. Many outdoor courses are being covered with canvass awnings.

Experts and sports authorities are yet unwilling to predict whether it will attain a permanent place in the sporting life of the country, but there is beginning to be a belief that because of its interesting features and the economy of play it may last.

Heart disease is the chief cause of death in Ohio, according to a survey made by the State Department of Health covering the last 20-year period.

Tuberculosis ranks seventh as a cause of death, while in 1910 it stood second, the survey shows.

That cancer is on the increase is indicated by the fact that it ranked sixth as the cause of death in 1910, while in 1929 it ranked third. Cerebral hemorrhage ranks second and influenza eighth.

The general death rate per 1000 population in 1910 was 13.7 per cent but in 1929 was 21.1 per cent.

DROUGHT RELIEF IN OHIO

Director Perry L. Green of the Department of Agriculture, chairman of the Ohio Drought Relief Committee, named by Governor Cooper, reports splendid progress in setting up the organization through which practical relief may be effected.

Mr. Green points out that this campaign of relief is not for the present year only, but that assistance will have to cover three years. Farmers will require two years of normal crops in the 1930 drought sections to catch up with their losses of this year.

There is said to be a lot of misunderstanding as to the nature and extent of the proposed federal and state aid under this program. Those who are expecting a free-handed donation party, such as the 1913 Red Cross flood relief in parts of Ohio, are doomed to disappointment, but substantial help will be afforded, say those in touch with the program.

Mr. Green points out that relief will be through six channels: freight reductions on incoming feed and forage and outgoing livestock sent as feeders; credit expansion; employment for farmer heads of families through public projects; supplying forage; Red Cross relief in cases of actual want; health protection.

WILL USE EXISTING AGENCIES

All of these activities will be promoted through existing agencies such as banks, dealers and Red Cross. Organization extends from a National committee, state committee, on down to local county committees. The latter body in each county will be permitted to largely designate the activities in that particular county. Counties included as entitled to drought relief will be those declared entitled upon application of local committees set up in accordance with the organization suggested by the state committee.

The counties in Ohio which have been tentatively listed as drought stricken by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and therefore entitled to freight reductions on feeds and forage are: Adams, Athens, Belmont, Brown, Butler, Clermont, Clinton, Coshocton, Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Gallia, Greene, Guernsey, Hamilton, Highland, Hocking, Holmes, Jackson, Knox, Lawrence, Licking, Madison, Meigs, Monroe, Morgan, Muskingum, Noble, Perry, Pickaway, Preble, Pike, Ross, Scioto, Tuscarawas, Vinton, Warren, Washington.

These may be added to by the state committee, based on surveys now well under way. The emergency freight rate calls for a reduction of 50 percent on feed shipped into the drought areas and on livestock shipped out to be fed. It is a relief measure and not a general freight rate reduction. "A county agent or other designated representative will certify that feed is needed, or that the livestock must be moved out to be fed. Through the county agricultural agent permits for the shipment at the special reduced rate will be issued," says Secretary Hyde's pronouncement.

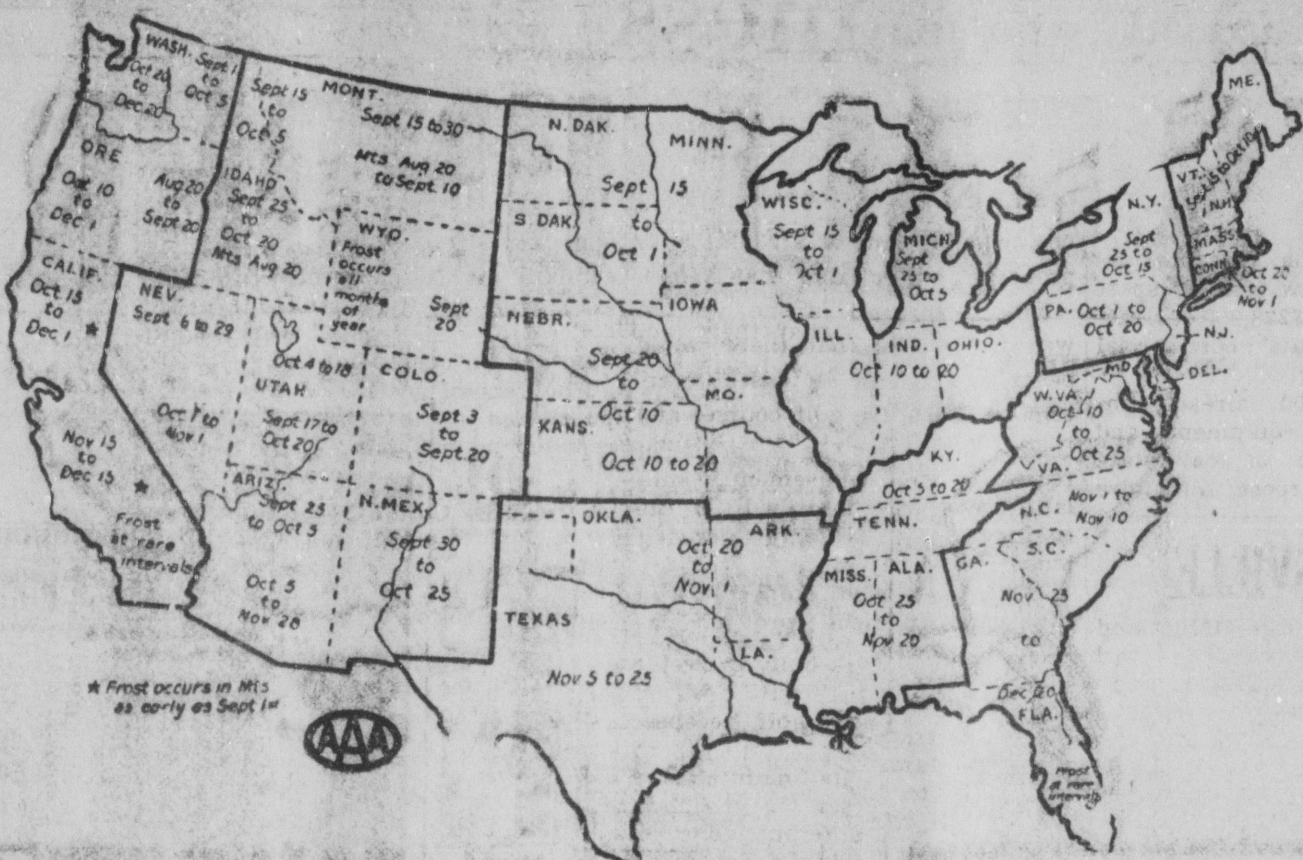

HIGHWAY EMPLOYMENT AID
Highway improvements in Ohio, which are to be the main source of employment in the stricken areas, are to be financed by Federal and State cooperation. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has authorized the apportionment of the Federal funds for highway improvement within a period ending June 30, 1932. Under this schedule Ohio has been apportioned the sum of $4,584,440.

H. C. Ransower, director of the agricultural extension institute, Ohio State University, and assistants, have about completed a survey of the state listing the extent of shortage and estimating the needs of feeds and forage in given sections.

County committees in the drought belt counties are being formed under county farm agent direction, and listed with the state committee.

Old Man Winter Just Around the Corner

FREEZING weather is on the way and the wise automobilist will take advantage of the warning by getting the cooling system of his car in shape for winter driving. The United States Weather Bureau has gone into its records of many years for the average dates of the first freezing temperatures in the various sections of the country. The approximate dates of the first freezes are noted in the above map and, according to the American Automobile Association, are a safe guide for automobile owners.

Experts in the automobile industry are agreed that the first step necessary in preparing for freezing temperatures is a thorough cleaning and tightening of the cooling system. It is pointed out also that this cleaning process cannot be done properly by ordinary flushing; the services of a garage mechanic should be utilized. Bolts must be loosened and rubber tubing detached in order to remove the large cakes of rust and dirt which cause most of the clogging. With a thoroughly clean cooling system the anti-freeze used will give satisfactory results.

Motorists are advised that it is well to keep an eye on the radiators after the refilling and introduction of the anti-freeze. Approved types of anti-freeze do not cause radiator leaks, as many automobilists have been led to believe; but they do indicate any cracks or loose spots which may already exist in the machinery. Damp spots will show up soon after the anti-freeze is in circulation and this should be a friendly warning that repairs are needed.

Edward S. 'Ned' Thatcher, Fox Post Office.

Ohio Boy Amazes Mother

"Marion's stomach was often upset and he suffered a lot with headaches," says Mrs. F. Messeldine, 7031 Zoeter Ave., Cleveland. "He was feverish and his breath was bad. I found he was constipated."

"A friend told me about California Fig Syrup, so I got some for Marion. It surely surprised me to see how quickly it stopped his feverishness, cleared his breath and tongue, regulated his bowels; made him a strong and energetic boy again."

The quick, safe way to cleanse and regulate the bowels of bilious, headachy, constipated children is with California Fig Syrup. Give it at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor and it acts without griping or discomfort. Appetite is increased by its use; digestion is assisted; weak stomach and bowels are given tone and strength.

For fifty years, doctors have endorsed this pure vegetable product. The genuine is always marked by the word California. Look for that when buying or you may get an imitation.

WHAT SORT OF HOME IS YOURS?

Is it comfortable to live in . . . attractive to show to your neighbors? Are the halls inviting . . . the living room hospitable . . . the dining room cheerful and convenient . . . the kitchens compact and well-organized? Do the bedrooms suggest repose?

If that home of yours doesn't measure up to these standards, it's time to refurnish. It's surprising how much a few pieces of new furniture add to the appearance and comfort of rooms. A new davenport or rug positively make a living room new. A new table and chairs can make the evening meal more palatable and life in general more pleasant.

Now is the ideal time to add new furniture to your home. Prices are at their lowest level since 1914. They will not stay down—indications are that factory costs will soon start upward. So make your re-furnishings plans at once. Consult the advertisements of furniture dealers in our columns, then visit their stores and let them help you gain new home charm.

Counties included as entitled to drought relief will be those declared entitled upon application of local committees set up in accordance with the organization suggested by the state committee.

The counties in Ohio which have been tentatively listed as drought stricken by the U. S. Department of Agriculture and therefore entitled to freight reductions on feeds and forage are: Adams, Athens, Belmont, Brown, Butler, Clermont, Clinton, Coshocton, Delaware, Fairfield, Fayette, Franklin, Gallia, Greene, Guernsey, Hamilton, Highland, Hocking, Holmes, Jackson, Knox, Lawrence, Licking, Madison, Meigs, Monroe, Morgan, Muskingum, Noble, Perry, Pickaway, Preble, Pike, Ross, Scioto, Tuscarawas, Vinton, Warren, Washington.

These may be added to by the state committee, based on surveys now well under way. The emergency freight rate calls for a reduction of 50 percent on feed shipped into the drought areas and on livestock shipped out to be fed. It is a relief measure and not a general freight rate reduction. "A county agent or other designated representative will certify that feed is needed, or that the livestock must be moved out to be fed. Through the county agricultural agent, permits for the shipment at the special reduced rate will be issued," says Secretary Hyde's pronouncement.

HIGHWAY EMPLOYMENT AID

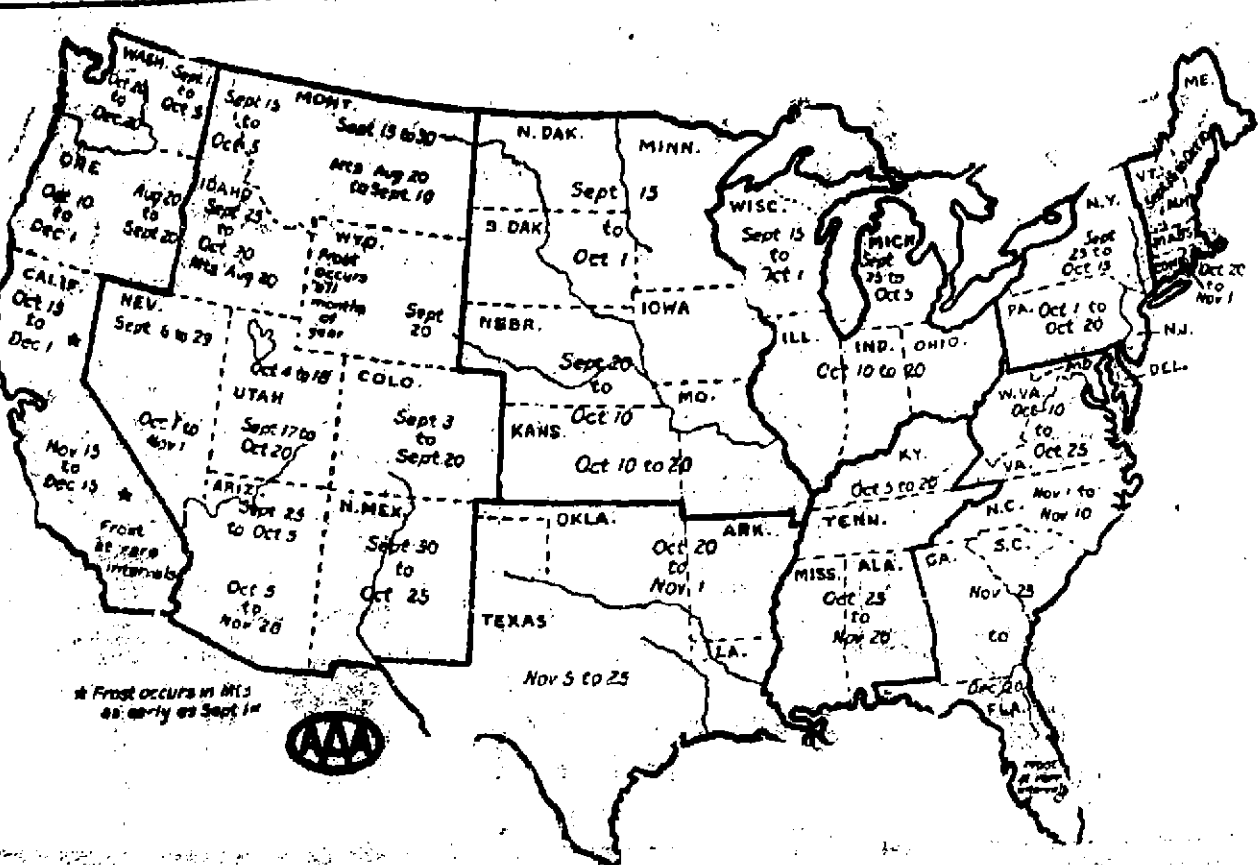

Highway improvements in Ohio, which are to be the main source of employment in the stricken areas, are to be financed by Federal and State cooperation. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde has authorized the apportionment of the Federal funds for highway improvement within a period ending June 30, 1932. Under this schedule Ohio has been apportioned the sum of $4,584,440.

H. C. Ransower, director of the agricultural extension institute, Ohio State University, and assistants, have about completed a survey of the state listing the extent of shortage and estimating the needs of feeds and forage in given sections.

County committees in the drought belt counties are being formed under county farm agent direction, and listed with the state committee.

The state committee named by Governor Cooper is: Perry L. Green, state director of Agriculture, chairman; Dr. Charles Neal, state director of health; Edward D. Seiter, Cincinnati, president of the Ohio Bankers' association; John F. Ahlers, Dayton, representing the American Red Cross; C. W. Van Horn, general manager of

FREEZING weather is on the way and the wise automobilist will take advantage of the warning by getting the cooling system of his car in shape for winter driving. The United States Weather Bureau has gone into its records of many years for the average dates of the first freezing temperatures in the various sections of the country. The approximate dates of the first freezes are noted in the above map and, according to the American Automobile Association, are a safe guide for automobile owners.

Experts in the automobile industry are agreed that the first step necessary in preparing for freezing temperatures is a thorough cleaning and tightening of the cooling system. It is pointed out also that this cleaning process cannot be done properly by ordinary flushing; the services of a garage mechanic should be utilized. Bolts must be loosened and rubber tubing detached in order to remove the large fakes of rust and dirt which cause most of the clogging. With a thoroughly clean cooling system the anti-freeze used will give satisfactory results. Motorists are advised that it is well to keep an eye on the radiators after the refilling and introduction of the anti-freeze. Approved types of anti-freeze do not cause radiator leaks, as many automobilists have been led to believe; but they do indicate any cracks or loose spots which may already exist in the machinery. Damp spots will show up soon after the anti-freeze is in circulation and this should be a friendly warning that repairs are needed.

the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, Cincinnati, representing all the railways doing business in Ohio; Walter F. Kirk, Port Clinton, master of the Ohio State Grange; Murray D. Lincoln, Columbus, general manager of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation; H. C. Ransower, director of the agricultural extension institute, Ohio State University; Root, N. Wald, Director of Highways, employment; Frank B. McMillen, president Ohio Chamber of Commerce.

Ohio Boy Amazes Mother

"Marion's stomach was often upset and he suffered a lot with headaches," says Mrs. F. Messeldine, 7031 Zoeter Ave., Cleveland. "He was feverish and his breath was bad. I found he was constipated."

"A friend told me about California Fig Syrup, so I got some for Marion. It surely surprised me to see how quickly it stopped his feverishness, cleared his breath and tongue, regulated his bowels; made him a strong and energetic boy again."

The quick, safe way to cleanse and regulate the bowels of bilious, headachy, constipated children is with California Fig Syrup. Give it at the first sign of bad breath, coated tongue, listlessness or feverishness. Every child loves its rich, fruity flavor and it acts without gripping or discomfort. Appetite is increased by its use; digestion is assisted; weak stomach and bowels are given tone and strength.

For fifty years, doctors have endorsed this pure vegetable product. The genuine is always marked by the word California. Look for that when buying or you may get an imitation.

Miniature Golf Is Big Business

BY ROBERT S. THORNBURGH.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.—There is a miniature golf course to each 5,000 population, probably 2,500,000 persons play the game daily and the annual income derived from this new form of sport is approximately $228,000,000, according to private commercial experts here today.

With $125,000,000 already invested in course equipment and $200,000,000 worth of real estate in use for this purpose, miniature golf has taken a real place in the nation's business picture. Officials believed that there is a six percent return on the real estate in use, or an income of $12,000,000 to property owners from that source.

Before the end of the year it was anticipated that there would be an increase of at least 10 percent in miniature golf courses and their employment as a means of recreation and amusement. Miniature golf was described as the country's most rapidly growing industry.

It has assumed importance in the unemployment problem, experts estimating that about 100,000 persons work daily to keep the golf courses in operation. Furthermore, miniature golf, because of the large amount of materials necessary to its maintenance is having an effect in stimulating from 12 to 15 different industries.

Experts said that the canvassing business, for instance, probably is enjoying an output of from 5 to 10 percent over normal as the result of the increasing practice of placing awnings over the courses and in the use of canvasses in sports related to golf.

A new development, with the approach of cold weather, is the establishment of indoor courses which will take up much unwanted property. Indoor courses are being built chiefly in the north so that devotees of the game may pursue their sport during the winter. Many outdoor courses are being covered with canvass awnings.

Experts and sports authorities are yet unwilling to predict whether it will attain a permanent place in the sporting life of the country, but there is beginning to be a belief that because of its interesting features and the economy of play it may last.

HEART DISEASE GREAT SCOURGE

Heart disease is the chief cause of death in Ohio, according to a survey made by the State Department of Health covering the last 20-year period.

Tuberculosis ranks seventh as a cause of death, while in 1910 it stood second, the survey shows. That cancer is on the increase is indicated by the fact that it ranked sixth as the cause of death in 1910, while in 1929 it ranked third. Cerebral hemorrhage ranks second and influenza eighth.

The general death rate per 1000 population in 1910 was 13.7 per cent but in 1929 was 21.1 per cent.

Has Circleville Progressed?

BOB WHITE SAYS:
Is she modern? As a small boy in Civil War days I was all eyes and ears and to this day I can find tucked away in memory's storeroom many things that happened. I also remember the town's outstanding features in those days: The Canal with its boats and packets was the means of transportation for people as well as the products of the farms; the profane captains and drivers on the freight boats made the cold chills creep up and down my back. But when we heard the packet bell ring as it came through the aqueduct there was a foot race on W. Mound-st for the best place on the bridge to see the packet in all its green and white beauty pass under the bridge.

The old aqueduct is a thing of loving memory to the boys of those days. Nothing but the old stone piers are now standing. We can worship them as the castle ruins are worshiped on the River Rhine for "what they were—not what they are."

The soldiers were taken to camp at Chillicothe in the boats on the Canal and on the stage coaches. We remember the stage coaches and the boys in blue. The driver of the four dashing horses was always a hero to the small boys that lined the street.

One of the outstanding equipments of Circleville was the fire department; volunteer department, one engine, drawn by men. I mention this to show you the then and the now. It was primitive indeed!

The streets were mud and ruts. One never got to the fire in time to save the building. Frequently the hose were not long enough, or the water in the cistern was too low to do any good. Man power was always wanting.

Oh, yes, these were "The good old days."

It was all right in winter for we youngsters, we had a royal time with our Canton flannel underwear, blue yarn socks and boots. The snow and the sleigh bells made happy times for us and we used to sing:

"Hark, Hark the dogs are barking, The boys and girls are out skylarking, Hear their voices, how sweetly they sing, Hear the bells, Oh how they ring, Let them ring."

I will never speak lightly of the "good old times," nor about the good old people that pioneered and made possible the good things we enjoy today.

Our country is growing greater, every score years millions are added to our population. Fifty years ago foreign nations were telling us, now they are asking "what Uncle Sam has to say," he generally knows.

Getting back to old time Canal days.

Canals were all right in their day, but we wonder if the talk of a barge canal from the Lakes to the Ohio river is not joining the craw-fish class and crawling backward. We never expect to see it; is it an idle dream? Pretty slow for our times. What we are asking ourselves "Is Circleville progressing?" I say yes.

Our streets are all paved or hard surfaced. North from the viaduct on N. Court-st was in our memory, truck gardens, Park Place our county fair grounds where the best jellies and quilts took first premium.

Only a few houses were in this section. Today new and beautiful residences are seen all over this section. And what was a pasture lot a few short years ago is today being built up with modern residences.

The Berger Hospital of fine architectural design has a fine location in this section.

Industrially, we can be proud of our canning plants, our grain elevators and mills.

The box factory that succeeded the straw-board mill is one of the largest in the state. Recently a nationally known stock-food mill has cast its lot with us.

Some folks are mourning for the passing of the old Court House, it was a beautiful old building with classic lines. But today we have one of the most imposing red sandstone, light stone trimmed marble interior and stairways in Ohio. It is well appointed in every way. Very few counties in the state can boast a finer one. Our city building is modernized; our fire department is ideal, motor equipped.

Our broom and Kippy-Kit factory employs a large number of workers. Our banks are strong, well managed and have an enviable record. Our stores are second to none in cities the size of ours. Our bus lines pass over our highways in all directions bringing strangers that can't but help making note of our fine schools, churches, Memorial hall. Our City Library is much the largest to be found in cities of our class; none are conducted better anywhere. In my wanderings I have never seen a place I thought I would exchange for ours.

You ask "Is Circleville progressing?" I say, Yes, Yes!

Last but not least, after a strenuous day, week or month we must be amused. One, if not the first place of amusement was on the third floor of the Wilkes block in W. Main-st. On a little stage 9x12 ft. just prior to the Civil War, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was given to this community. No drop curtain, no scenery, just think of it.

Today we have three fine theatres, where our people can see the same pictures that are shown in all large cities. Yes, yes, we are progressing.

Our beautiful shade trees that are to be found on all streets always say something to me that I never hear elsewhere, something like this:

"Mid pleasures and palaces—though we may roam—Be it ever so humble—there is no place like home."

What is the foundation of our prosperity? Agriculture is the outstanding source of wealth. When on a visit to Nova Scotia I ran across an old man that had known the Smith Bros. He talked with me about broom corn farms. At another time when in Bermuda another old man asked me where I was from, when I said Circleville, Pickaway-co, he was delighted. He said that in the early days when quite a lad he went with his father to call on the Renicks and Steeles, pioneers who dealt in Short-horn cattle. The cattle were driven over the mountains to Philadelphia.

There is another thing for which Circleville is noted, that's our annual Pumpkin Show.

I registered at a hotel in California. The clerk saw Circleville; he grasped my hand and said: "The best time I ever had in my life was when I spent three days waiting to get my customers' attention—Oh, boy—the Pumpkin

At the Telephone in 1875

Miss Ruth Rose shows how the young miss of half a century ago carried on her telephone conversations. The instrument, which is the first Bell telephone and dates from 1875, is one of several interesting exhibits included in the "Men and Machines" collection, with which the Museum of the Peaceful Arts is opening its new quarters in New York City.

Show was in full blast and the stores full of customers. All I could do was to wait. It seemed three short days at that."

Circleville has over 7,000 population and directly or indirectly a great many are interested in farms. Pickaway-co has a population of 27,000—all farm-minded. Yes, agricultural interests pay the freight.

Courage to Turn Back

"BE" bold, be bold—but not too bold!" was the famous advice given to the medieval knight. Our knights of the air are learning that lesson.

It takes courage along with intelligence, for aviators enroute from Japan to America on a great pioneer flight to turn back to Tokyo when nearly one-third of the way across. It would be easier for most men to keep on. Many a pilot, indeed, has yielded to that temptation since ocean flying began—and his bones rest in the sea.

Bromley and Gatty lost nothing in public esteem by acting from judgment rather than desire. And they had a good precedent. Coste, the great French flyer on his first trial of the Atlantic, turned to flee from head winds when half way across. With the life and the ship he saved thereby, he triumphed later. Bromley and Gatty may do likewise.

Where to Get Off

"BE" lieve me, I told him where to get off!" So says the truculent young motorist after a little bang with another car in which the fenders of each automobile got a slight bend.

The expense of repair did not amount to as much as a few gallons of gas. Both were too much in a hurry and more or less in the wrong. Had both been courteous, the affair might have come out pleasantly, perhaps with a new friendship. At the very least it would have ended with two young drivers more careful in the future, and going off with friendly feelings for each other. As it was, both went off with rage and poisoned minds.

"Believe me, I told that Frenchman where to get off!" So says the truculent traveling American who had had a dispute over the twelve-years-past war with a fellow-passenger in a train.

Had the American been courteous and open-minded, he would have found his French co-traveler willing to meet him on equal ground. Each would have learned much from the other. Each would have ended the journey with added respect for the other's country and its people. They would have come to respect the other's point of view.

As it was, each left the conference with added wrath. Each had added fertilizer to the seeds of international discord.

Peace, whether of families, neighbors or nations, does not come of itself. It does not come out of negation. It is a product of deliberate friendliness, courtesy, self-control and the open mind.

Ape and Man

YOU can take seriously or humorously as you like, the suggestion of Dr. H. S. Harrison, a British anthropologist, that man is a mistake.

Accepting the evolutionary theory that man and ape branched off from the same anthropoid stem, Dr. Harrison holds that it is a pity man ever parted company with his hairy cousin. He seems to think we have lost a good deal and haven't much compensatory gain.

It's no harm doing a little thinking about that, anyway.

Hamlet may be quoted against the scientist. "What a piece of work is a man!" He exclaims. "How noble in reason, how infinite in faculty! In form and moving how express and admirable! In action how like an angel! In apprehension how like a god!"

At our best, when we are feeling good and full of egotism, we may agree with that. But we don't live up to the description much of the time. And Hamlet himself, as we know, lived unhappily, struggled with problems too big for him and came to a bad end.

The ape is fine—as an ape. We couldn't take the place of that bull-necked, low-browed, big-jawed cousin. We couldn't compete with him on his own level. We've lost a good deal.

Yet we seem to have got something, too, in parting company with him. If we're not so good an ape as he is, he isn't so good a man as we are. If he can break us in two, we can shoot him to pieces. We can beat him at boxing, baseball, tennis and golf.

We live longer, though more painfully. We have more needs, and work harder to supply them. We can look up when we feel like it, which isn't very often. We can think about heaven, which he probably can't; also about hell. And we have the satisfaction of feeling immensely superior.

PATERNAL PRIDE

"The SEA BRIDE"

THE ROMANCE OF AN EVENTFUL WHALING CRUISE

BY BEN AMES WILLIAMS

CHAPTER XXXVII.
"WHO says I stole whiskey?" Roy demanded.

"I," Faith told him.

"Who—Somebody lied to you?"

"No."

Roy was near tears with bafflement.

"Why—what makes you—"

"Don't you want to tell?" Faith asked quickly.

"It's a lie, I say!"

She looked to her husband. Noll saw they were all waiting on him, and he tried to rise to the occasion.

"By Jupiter, Roy, what did you go and do that for? Can't a man have a ship without a pack of thieves on her? Mr. Tobey, you—"

He waved his eyes, swung helplessly to Faith. He seemed to ask her to speak for him.

"Take him on deck, Dan!" she said, "till Cap'n Wing decides."

"I tell you," Roy insisted, "I didn't—"

But Dan'l Tobey hushed him. Dan'l was getting his first glimpse of the new Faith, and he was afraid of her. He took Roy's arm, led him out and away. Faith and Noll were left alone.

At noon that day, at Noll Wing's profane command, Roy was put in irons and locked in the after 'tween-decks to stay a week on bread and water. The boy cursed Faith to her face for that, and Faith went to her cabin and dropped on her knees and prayed.

But she kept a steady face for the men, and in particular she kept a steady eye for Dan'l Tobey. She knew Dan'l now! Dan'l had warned Roy before bringing him to the cabin. He must have warned the boy, for Roy was prepared for the accusation. He must have warned the boy, therefore, he must have known what Faith would assert.

And Faith knew enough of Dan'l's ascendancy over Roy to be sure the mate had prompted her brother's theft.

She must watch Dan'l, fight him. And—she thanked God for Brander. There was a man, a man on her side. She was not to fight alone.

She dreamed of Brander that night. He was battling for her, in her dream, against shadowy and unseen things. And in her dream she thought he was her husband.

An unrest seized Noll Wing—an unrest that was like fear. He assumed, by small degrees, the aspect of a hunted man. It was as if the death of Slatter prefigured to him what his own end would be. His nerves betrayed him; he could not bear to have any man approach him from behind. He struck out nervously at Willis Cox one day when Willis spoke from one side, where Noll had not seen him standing.

The continual storms of the Solander irked him; the racking work of whaling, when it was necessary to run to port with each kill fretted the flesh from his bones. They lost a whale one day in a sudden squall that developed into a gale and swept them far to the southward, and when the weather moderated and Dan'l Tobey started to work back to the grounds again, Noll would have none of it.

"Set your course to the eastward," he commanded, "I'm fed up with the Solander. We'll hit the islands again."

Dan'l protested that there was nowhere such whaling as the Solander offered, but Noll would not be persuaded. He resented the attempt to argue with him.

"No, by Jupiter!" he swore. "A pity if a man can't have his way. Hell with the Solander, Dan'l. I'm sick of storms and cold. Get north to where it's warm again."

So they did as he insisted, and ran into slack times once more. The men at first exulted in their new leisure; they were well enough content to kill a whale and loaf a week before another kill. Then they began to be impatient with inaction; discontent arose among them. They remembered the ambergris; and their talk was that they need stay out no longer, that the voyage was already a success; that they had a right to expect to head for home.

Noll was wax in Faith's hands in these days. His fear, growing upon him, had shaken all the fiber out of the man. He could be swayed by Dan'l, by old Tichel, by Faith, by almost anyone—a success in a single matter. He was drinking steadily now, and drinking more than ever before. He was never sober, never without the traces of liquor in his eyes and his loose lips and slack muscles. And they could not shake him in this matter. He would not be deterred alone, and they avoided each other as they would have shunned a precipice.

Save for one day, a single day, a day when Faith called Brander to her on the deck and spoke to him; a day that would have been, but for Faith's strength, the bloody destruction of them both.

The incident was the climax of two trains of events, extending over days—extending, in the one case, back to that first day when Dan'l had roused the jealousy in Noll and blown it into flame. Dan'l had never let that flame die out. He fanned it constantly, and when he saw in Faith's eyes, after the matter of Roy's theft of the whiskey, that she had guessed his part in it, he threw himself more hotly into his intrigue. He kept at Noll's side whenever it was possible. He covertly taunted the captain with his growing fear of Brander. He roused Noll to gusts of rage, but always these passed in words, and Noll fell back into his lethargy.

Courage to Turn Back

BE bold, be bold—but not too bold!" was the famous advice given to the medieval knight. Our knights of the air are learning that lesson.

It takes courage along with intelligence, for aviators enroute from Japan to America on a great pioneer flight to turn back to Tokyo when nearly one-third of the way across. It would be easier for most men to keep on. Many a pilot, indeed, has yielded to that temptation since ocean flying began—and his bones rest in the sea.

Bromley and Gatty lost nothing in public esteem by acting from judgment rather than desire. And they had a good precedent. Coste, the great French flyer on his first trial of the Atlantic, turned to flee from head winds when half way across. With the life and the ship he saved thereby, he triumphed later. Bromley and Gatty may do likewise.

Where to Get Off

BELEVE me, I told him where to get off!" So says the truculent young motorist after a little bang with another car in which the fenders of each automobile got a slight bend.

The expense of repair did not amount to as much as a few gallons of gas. Both were too much in a hurry and more or less in the wrong. Had both been courteous, the affair might have come out pleasantly, perhaps with a new friendship. At the very least it would have ended with two young drivers more careful in the future, and going off with friendly feelings for each other. As it was, both went off with rage and poisoned minds.

"Believe me, I told that Frenchman where to get off!" So says the truculent traveling American who had had a dispute over the twelve-years-past war with a fellow-passenger in a train.

Had the American been courteous and open-minded, he would have found his French co-traveler willing to meet him on equal ground. Each would have learned much from the other. Each would have ended the journey with added respect for the other's country and its people. They would have come to respect the other's point of view.

As it was, each left the conference with added wrath. Each had added fertilizer to the seeds of international discord.

Peace, whether of families, neighbors or nations, does not come of itself. It does not come out of negation. It is a product of deliberate friendliness, courtesy, self-control and the open mind.

Ape and Man

YOU can take seriously or humorously as you like, the suggestion of Dr. H. S. Harrison, a British anthropologist, that man is a mistake.

Accepting the evolutionary theory that man and ape branched off from the same anthropoid stem, Dr. Harrison holds that it is a pity man ever parted company with his hairy cousin. He seems to think we have lost a good deal and haven't much compensatory gain.

It's no harm doing a little thinking about that, anyway.

Hamlet may be quoted against the scientist. "What a piece of work is a man!" He exclaims. "How noble in reason, how infinite in faculty! In form and moving how express and admirable! In action how like an angel! In apprehension how like a god!"

At our best, when we are feeling good and full of egotism we may agree with that. But we don't live up to the description much of the time. And Hamlet himself, as we know, lived unhappily struggled with problems too big for him and came to a bad end.

The ape is fine—as an ape. We couldn't take the place of that well-necked, low-browed, big-jawed cousin. We couldn't compete with him on his own level. We've lost a good deal.

Yet we seem to have got something too, in parting company with him. We're not so good an ape as he is, he isn't so good a man as we are. If he can break us in two we can shoot him to pieces. We can beat him at boxing, baseball, tennis and golf.

We're ruder though more painfully. We have more needs, and work harder to supply them. We can look up, when we feel like it, which isn't very often. We can think about heaven, which he probably can't. Also about hell. And we have the satisfaction of feeling immensely superior.

PATERNAL PRIDE

"The SEA BRIDE"

By BEN AMES WILLIAMS

THE ROMANCE OF AN EVENTFUL WHALING CRUISE

CHAPTER XXXVII.
"Who says I stole whiskey?" Roy demanded.

"Faith told him."

"No—Somebody lied to you?"

Roy was near tears with bafflement.

"Why—what makes you—"

"Don't you want to tell?" Faith asked quietly.

"It's a lie, I say!"

She looked to her husband. Noll saw they were all waiting on him, and he tried to rise to the occasion.

"By Jupiter, Roy, what did you go and do that for? Can't a man have a ship without a pack of thieves on her? Mr. Tobey, you—"

He wavered, his eyes swung helplessly to Faith. He seemed to ask her to speak for him.

"Take him on deck, Dan'l," she said, "till Cap'n Wing decides."

"I tell you," Roy insisted, "I didn't!"

But Dan'l Tobey hushed him. Dan'l was getting his first glimpse of the new Faith, and he was afraid of her. He took Roy's arm, led him out and away. Faith and Noll were left alone.

At noon that day, at Noll Wing's profane command, Roy was put in irons and locked in the after 'tween-decks to stay a week on bread and water. The boy cursed Faith to her face for that, and Faith went to her cabin and dropped on her knees and prayed.

But she kept a steady face for the men, and in particular she kept a steady eye for Dan'l Tobey. She knew Dan'l now! Dan'l had warned Roy before bringing him to the cabin. He must have warned the boy, for Roy was prepared for the accusation. He must have warned the boy, therefore, he must have known what Faith would assert.

And Faith knew enough of Dan'l's ascendancy over Roy to be sure the mate had prompted her brother's theft.

She must watch Dan'l, fight him. And—she thanked God for Brander. There was a man, a man on her side. She was not to fight alone.

She dreamed of Brander that night. He was battling for her, in her dream, against shadowy and unseen things. And in her dream she thought he was her husband.

An unrest seized Noll Wing—an unrest that was like fear. He assumed, by small degrees, the aspect of a hunted man. It was as if the death of Slatoff prefigured to him what his own end would be. His near-betrayal of him; he could not bear to have any man approach him from behind. He struck out nervously at Willis Cox one day when Willis spoke from one side where Noll had not seen him standing.

The continual storms of the Solander asked him; the racking work of whaling, when it was necessary to run to port with each kill, fretted the flesh from his bones. They lost a whale one day in a sudden squall that developed into a gale and swept them far to the southward, and when the weather moderated and Dan'l Tobey started to work back to the grounds again, Noll would have none of it.

"Set your course to the eastward," he commanded. "I'm fed up with the Solander. We'll hit the mainland again."

Dan'l protested that there was nowhere such whaling as the Solander offered, but Noll would not be persuaded. He repeated the attempt to argue with him.

"No, by Jupiter," he swore. "A man can't have his way. I'm sick of the Solander, Dan'l. I'm sick of storms and cold. Get north to where it's warm again."

So they did as he insisted, and ran into slack times once more. The men at first exulted in their new leisure; they were well enough content to kill a whale and loaf a week before another kill. Then they began to be impatient with inaction; discontent arose among them. They remembered the ambergris; and their talk was that they need stay out no longer, that the voyage was already a success, that they had a right to expect to head for home.

Noll was wax in Faith's hands in these days. His fear, growing upon him, had shaken all the fiber out of the man. He could be swayed by Faith, by old Tichel, by Faith, by almost anyone—save in a single matter. He was drinking steadily now, and drinking more than ever before. He was never sober, never without the traces of liquor in his eyes and his loose lips and slack muscles. And they could not shake him in this matter. He would not be deterred.

never alone, and they avoided each other as they would have shunned a precipice.

Save for one day, a single day, a day when Faith called Brander to her on the deck and spoke to him; a day that would have been, but for Faith's strength, the bloody destruction of them both.

The incident was the climax of two trains of events, extending over days—extending, in the one case, back to that first day when Dan'l had roused the jealousy in Noll and blown it into flame. Dan'l had never let that flame die out. He fanned it constantly, and when he saw in Faith's eyes, after the matter of Roy's theft of the whiskey, that she had guessed his part in it, he threw himself more hotly into his intrigue. He kept at Noll's side whenever it was possible. He covertly taunted the captain with his growing fear of Brander. He roused Noll to guess of rage, but always these passed in words, and Noll fell back into his lethargy.

Dan'l was getting his first glimpse of the new Faith, and he was afraid of her.

nied the liquor that he craved. Faith never felt more keenly the fact of her marriage to Noll and her identity with him than now. She never thought of herself apart from him; and when he debauched himself she felt soiled as if she were herself degraded. Nevertheless, she clung to him, lived the vows she had given him.

There were other times, after that first, when she dreamed of Brander. She could not curb her dreams. He was much in them; but waking, she put the man away from her. She was Noll's; Noll was hers.

Brander avoided her. His heart was sick; he possessed it utterly. But he gave no sign; he never relaxed the grip in which he held himself.

Now and then, on deck, when Noll swore at her or whined or fretted, Brander had to swing away and out the thing behind him, but he did it. He was strong enough to do this; he was almost strong enough to keep his thoughts from Faith. Almost—but not quite. She dwelt always with him; he was sick with sorrow and pity and yearning for the right to cherish her.

They spoke when they had to, in the cabin or on deck; but they were

L. BROTHERHOOD ENJOYS SESSION

Coach P. S. Herberholz Explains Character Building By Athletics.

Trinity Lutheran Brotherhood's meeting of Thursday evening added another score to the success of the organizations activities.

The meeting was opened by the gathering singing "My Country 'tis of Thee," this being followed by the reading of the Sixteenth Psalm and Prayer by Rev. G. J. Troutman, D. D.

All then joined in the singing of "Savior Like a Shepherd Lead Us." The regular business was then transacted, after which a half hour recess was declared by the president, during which time Frank Palm and his committee of nine served chili con carne to the satisfaction of all.

As the opener of the program, John W. Walters delighted the audience with a vocal solo; "My Little Gypsy Sweet Heart."

The general topic of the evening was Character Building; L. E. Goeller having been assigned "Efficiency," Harry W. Heffner "Personality" and Rev. G. J. Troutman, D. D., "Christianity."

Mr. Goeller having been called to Kansas City on business, his time was given over to athletic director, P. S. Herberholz of the city schools, who choose to talk on activity in athletics in Character building. All of the speakers were very interesting and their efforts plainly showed that much thought had been given to the subject.

Gladden Troutman's violin solo "The Old Refrain," by Fritz Kreisler was well received by the entire audience.

Christian Schwarz was next introduced and pleasingly sang "Somewhere in Old Wyoming."

The program was well rounded out by Carl Leist's singing a group of two numbers: "Come to the Fair" by Martin, and Love's Old Sweet Song" as arranged by Molay.

At the next session to be held on October 2, J. R. Noecker and J. D. Hummel will captain a Catechetical Contest that is looked forward to with interest. The music for the occasion will be in charge of H. M. Crites, with E. C. Ebert as the chairman of the lunch-committee.

Don't Put Off Appendicitis Treatment

Fear of Surgery Causes Many to Hesitate, But an Operation Isn't Always Necessary

By R. S. COPELAND, M.D.
U. S. Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

CONSTIPATION may be blamed for many of the disorders from which we suffer. Among such troubles is appendicitis.

Formerly little was known of the condition. Many cases of inflammation of the bowels or "acute gastritis," were really attacks of what is known as "appendicitis."

There may be either an acute or a chronic condition. In chronic appendicitis the patient is troubled by repeated mild attacks of pain.

It may take the form of a sensation of burning or aching in the right side of the abdomen. As a rule, the pain, in such cases, is not enough to keep the victim from his work.

This type of ailment is probably due to a chronically inflamed appendix. It has not yet become severely affected. Or it may be a flare-up of some past acute attack.

An attack of acute appendicitis is likely to come on suddenly. There is severe pain in the right abdominal region, with great tenderness. The patient wants to lie on his back with the right leg drawn up to his chest.

There is considerable rise in temperature. Loss of appetite, nausea, and often vomiting are other symptoms. Constipation is usually present before the attack.

In ordinary cases the symptoms last for a few days, or a week or two then gradually disappear. But in gangrenous appendicitis, the symptoms are all aggravated. The fever is very high and death may come suddenly if the affected organ is not removed.

The treatment of a mild case is simple. Keep the patient on a light diet, preferably liquid and apply a hot water bag to the site of the pain. Be sure to clear up the constipation, but do not use strong cathartics. Your doctor will advise the treatment best suited to the particular case.

Some surgeons advise that the appendix be removed as soon as the trouble has been diagnosed, but usually it is thought best to clear up the acute symptoms before operating. However, if there is any reason to suspect a abscess formation, immediate removal of the organ is necessary.

Thousands of cases of appendicitis have disappeared without operative procedure. The profession is making progress in the control of this ailment and perhaps in the majority of cases will not advise surgery.

I say this because many persons hesitate to call a doctor "for fear he will say an operation is needed." This is foolishness. You must set your fears aside and have the wise physician tell you what is essential to your welfare.

Theatres

AT THE METROPOLITAN

A cast of the greatest comedy stars from both the stage and screen appear in the hilarious comedy sketches of "King of Jazz," the Universal super-extravaganza starring Paul Whiteman and his band which comes to the Metropolitan theatre on Saturday.

With Whiteman, Laura La Plante, Jeanette Loff, Glenn Tyron, Merna Kennedy, Kathryn Crawford, "Slim" Summerville and others from the screen, and Billy Kent, Grace Hayes, Frank Leslie, Charles Irwin, the Sisters G. George Chills, Jeanie Lang and other musical comedy and vaudeville stars from the stage, the clever sketches provide laughs between the spectacular numbers of the picture.

There are six of these sketches in the revue, all photographed in Technicolor and recorded in all-Movietone just as are the colorful song specialties and the musical spectacle numbers. Thus specialties are flanked with spectacle and comedy with both.

"King of Jazz" is Whiteman's debut on the screen, both as the world's most famous maestro of music and as a comedian in person. One of the sketches was especially written as a vehicle for his comedy talents.

AT THE CLIFTONA

"Our Blushing Brides" with Joan Crawford in the starring role and such cinema favorites as Anita Page, Dorothy Sebastian, Robert Montgomery, Raymond Hackett and John Miljan in prominent supporting roles will be the screen attraction at the Cliftona theatre starting Friday and continuing for two days.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is said to have outdone itself in the matter of lavish settings, costumes, and unusual features for this production, having started off with a bang by hiring an entire Los Angeles department store, personnel and all, for the opening scenes which depict the daily routine of three women employees.

AT THE GRAND

A remunerative business without an investment is rarely found, but few laymen realize the immense amount of money that must be invested in equipment and paraphernalia before bringing to perfection a Temple of Mystery such as will be on display at the Grand when Mysterious Smith brings his massive production for an engagement of seven days, starting Sunday.

These big illusions, such as Mr. Smith employs, are not created in wholesale quantities like shoes, hats, or "tin lizzies." Each one as a rule, must be made separately, as they are generally owned and copyrighted by the inventor who reserves their use for himself or to some one or two of the more prominent magicians. Patterns, molds and plans cost money, and the manufacture of one item is always costly.

Has Circleville Progressed?

BOB WHITE SAYS:

Is she modern? As a small boy in Civil War days I was all eyes and ears and to this day I can find tucked away in memory's storehouse many things that happened. I also remember the town's outstanding features in those days: The Canal with its boats and packets was the means of transportation for people as well as the products of the farms; the profane captains and drivers on the freight boats made the cold chills creep up and down my back. But when we heard the packet bell ring as it came through the aqueduct there was a foot race on W. Mound-st for the best place on the bridge to see the packet in all its green and white beauty pass under the bridge.

The old aqueduct is a thing of loving memory to the boys of those days. Nothing but the old stone piers are now standing. We can worship them as the castle ruins are worshiped on the River Rhine for "what they were—not what they are."

The soldiers were taken to camp at Chillicothe in the boats on the Canal and on the stage coaches. We remember the stage coaches and the boys in blue. The driver of the four dashing horses was always a hero to the small boys that lined the street.

One of the outstanding equipments of Circleville was the fire department; volunteer department, one engine, drawn by men. I mention this to show you the then and the now. It was primitive indeed!

The streets were mud and ruts. One never got to the fire in time to save the building. Frequently the hose were not long enough, or the water in the cistern was too low to do any good. Man power was always wanting.

Oh, yes, these were "The good old days."

It was all right in winter for we youngsters, we had a royal time with our Canton flannel underwear, blue yarn socks and boots.

The snow and the sleigh bells made happy times for us and we used to sing:

"Hark, Hark the dogs are barking, The boys and girls are out sky-larking, Hear their voices, how sweetly they sing, Hear the bells, Oh how they ring, Let them ring."

I will never speak lightly of the "good old times," nor about the good old people that pioneered and made possible the good things we enjoy today.

Our country is growing greater, every score years millions are added to our population. Fifty years ago foreign nations were telling us, now they are asking "what Uncle Sam has to say," he generally knows.

Getting back to old time Canal days.

Canals were all right in their day, but we wonder if the talk of a barge canal from the Lakes to the Ohio river is not joining the craw-fish class and crawling backward. We never expect to see it; is it an idle dream? Pretty slow for our times. What are we asking ourselves "Is Circleville progressing?" I say yes.

Our streets are all paved or hard surfaced. North from the viaduct on N. Court-st was in our memory, truck gardens, Park Place our county fair grounds where the best jellies and quilts took first premium.

Only a few houses were in this section. Today new and beautiful residences are seen all over this section. And what was a pasture lot a few short years ago is today being built up with modern residences.

The Berger Hospital of fine architectural design has a fine location in this section.

Industrially, we can be proud of our canning plants, our grain elevators and mills.

The box factory that succeeded the straw-board mill is one of the largest in the state. Recently a nationally known stock-food mill has cast its lot with us.

Some folks are mourning for the passing of the old Court House, it was a beautiful old building with classic lines. But today we have one of the most imposing red sandstone, light stone trimmed marble interior and stairways in Ohio. It is well appointed in every way. Very few counties in the state can boast a finer one. Our city building is modernized; our fire department is ideal, motor equipped. Our broom and Kippy-Kit factory employs a large number of workers. Our banks are strong, well managed and have an enviable record. Our stores are second to none in cities the size of ours. Our bus lines pass over our highways in all directions bringing strangers that can't but help making note of our fine schools, churches, Memorial hall. Our City Library is much the largest to be found in cities of our class; none are conducted better anywhere. In my wanderings I have never seen a place I thought I would exchange for ours.

You ask "Is Circleville progressing?" I say, Yes, Yes!

Last but not least, after a strenuous day, week or month we must be amused. One, if not the first place of amusement was on the third floor of the Wilkes block in W. Main-st. On a little stage 9x12 ft. just prior to the Civil War, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was given to this community. No drop curtain, no scenery, just think of it.

Today we have three fine theatres, where our people can see the same pictures that are shown in all large cities. Yes, yes, we are progressing.

Our beautiful shade trees that are to be found on all streets always say something to me that I never hear elsewhere, something like this:

"Mid pleasures and palaces—though we may roam— Be it ever so humble—there is no place like home."

What is the foundation of our prosperity? Agriculture is the outstanding source of wealth. When on a visit to Nova Scotia I ran across an old man that had known the Smith Bros. He talked with me about broom corn farms. At another time when in Bermuda another old man asked me where I was from, when I said Circleville, Pickaway-co, he was delighted. He said that in the early days when quite a lad he went with his father to call on the Renicks and Steeles, pioneers who dealt in Short-horn cattle. The cattle were driven over the mountains to Philadelphia.

There is another thing for which Circleville is noted, that's our annual Pumpkin Show.

I registered at a hotel in California. The clerk saw Circleville; he grasped my hand and said: "The best time I ever had in my life was when I spent three days waiting to get my customers' attention—Oh, boy—the Pumpkin

At the Telephone in 1875

Miss Ruth Rose shows how the young miss of half a century ago carried on her telephone conversations. The instrument, which is the first Bell telephone and dates from 1875, is one of several interesting exhibits included in the "Men and Machines" collection, with which the Museum of the Peaceful Arts is opening its new quarters in New York City.

Show was in full blast and the stores full of customers. All I could do was to wait. It seemed three short days at that."

Circleville has over 7,000 population and directly or indirectly a great many are interested in farms. Pickaway-co has a population of 27,000—all farm-minded. Yes, agricultural interests pay the freight.

Sophomores Are Secret Of Ohio Gridiron Season

By JOSEPH K. RUBENBROD
ATHENS, O., Sept. 19. — The ability of several good-looking sophomores appears to be the salvation this season of the Ohio university bobcats, Buckeye conference champions of 1929 and one of the few undefeated football teams in the United States last year.

The coaches and followers of the green and white this fall may look rather optimistically at the heavy forward wall, but there's another story behind the line. Russ Kepner and Clark Gabriel are the sole survivors of that great backfield which scored 306 points against strong opposition last season. Jerry Warshawer, quarterback, and Ray Hart, a fullback, are working at those posts now but there's possibility they may be replaced by newcomers.

PEDEN IS BUSY
Coach Don Peden, who is exceptionally busy right now, stopped only long enough to say that he expects the hardest campaign in the history of the Buckeye association. "Ohio should have a good team," he said, "but it is going to be very hard to replace six All-Ohio men."

Although there are 16 letter-men available from the championship squad, Coach Peden and his assistants believe the task of replacing those six all-stars is next to impossible.

The biggest loss was Ray Singer, of Cleveland, quarterback, who was transformed overnight from "just another backfield man" into one of the state's outstanding ball carriers. Another remarkable back was James "Chick" Young, whose mystifying handling of the ball and his plunging through the line was one of the greatest factors in the 1929 team's success.

BRAMMER GONE
The other stars who were lost by graduation of John Brammer, of Marietta, and Clyde Cramer, of Uhrichsville, ends, George Hasting, of Malden, Mass., tackle, and James Papritan, of Cleveland, guard.

A set of dependable endmen is the important need for this team which must defend its championship laurels. There are four candidates for these two positions who saw service last year but none is outstanding. Coach Peden has shifted Marshall, a center, and Rumbaugh, halfback, to the wings in his attempt to develop another great line. Last season's forward wall permitted only 13 points to be scored against the Bobcats in nine games.

Marshall Griffith, 235-pounder, is certain of holding down his old post at tackle. Three other lettermen tackles are battling for the other tackle job. They are Swindell, Coos and Tarzinski.

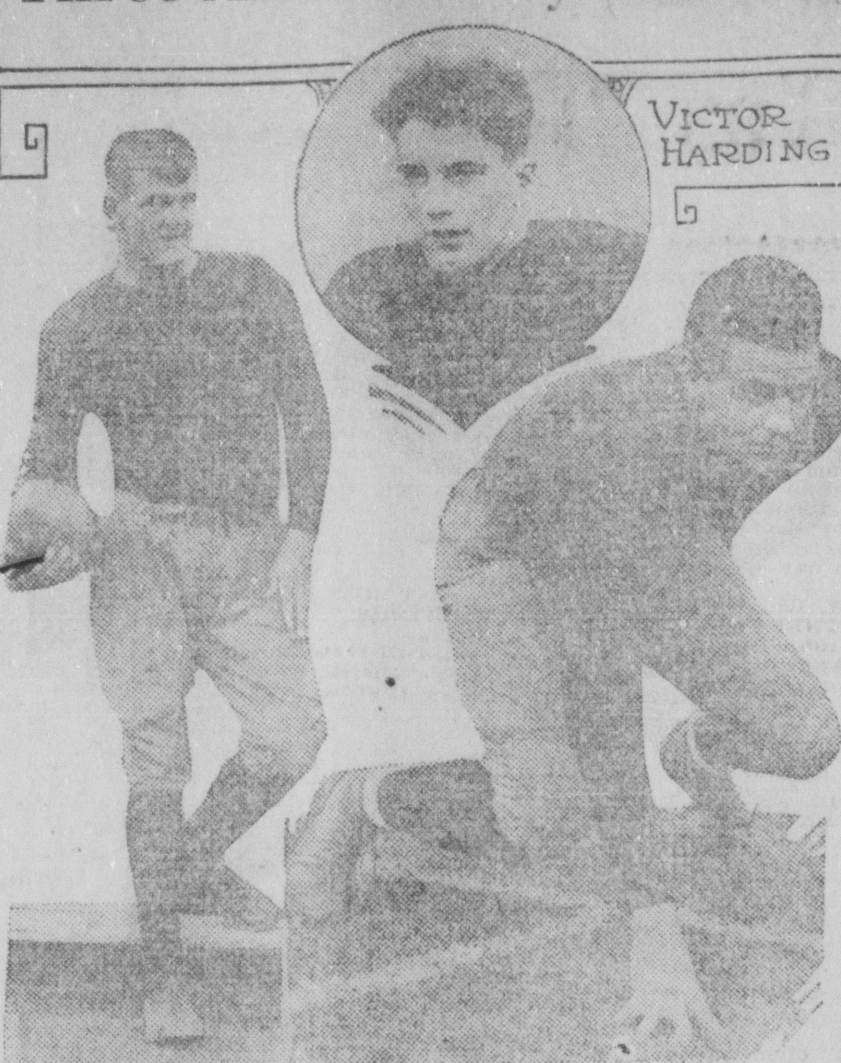

George Brown, regular pivot man last year, is back at his berth again and will be given ample support by Taraschke.

Ohio is well fortified by guards. Christman, Usilaner, Crites and Esomont would make any coach happy. All are high-type linemen.

CENTER STRONG
With this array of experienced material, the center of the line should be just as strong as in 1929. There is some doubt about the flanks but anyone would bet that Peden, a master coach, can develop a couple that will be good.

The schedule opens here with Wilmington college September 27. After that there is Butler univer-

CARDINALS APPEAR IN

Defeat Brooklyn For Third Straight Contest, Teams Concede Pennant.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—With only nine games to play, the National League leaders, St. Louis, today opened a series with the lowly Phillies, while the second place Robins enjoyed a day of rest. Chicago, in third place, opened with the Braves at Boston.

Brooklyn is two games behind the Cardinals and Chicago is two and one-half games in the race.

The Robins have only seven more games to play and the experts figured this morning only a near-miracle would put the flock back on the top of the column, while only an outside chance was given the Bruins.

New York, in fourth place, is five and one-half games behind St. Louis and out of the race. The Giants engage Cincinnati here today.

Standings today were:
St. Louis W. L. Pct.
Brooklyn 85 60 .586
Chicago 84 63 .571
New York 80 66 .543

The Cardinals sweep of the series with Brooklyn eliminated the Robins in the opinion of some of the experts and yesterday's smacking down of the Cubs by the Giants put a crimp in the chances of Chicago. Pointing out that St. Louis downed Brooklyn three times after the Robins held Chicago to one run in three games, the wise ones said today the superiority of the Cardinals was clearly established and held that it was all over but the shouting.

By downing Chicago, the world champion Athletics won the American League bunting again. The 1930 pennant is the seventh for Manager Connie Mack and gave the Athletics all time honors in titles won. New York and Boston have each won six times.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 19.—Princess Ileana, sister of King Carol, is slowly recovering from an acute attack of rheumatism. She has been confined to her apartment at the royal palace for several days with high temperature.

LIPTON LAUDS SPORTSMANSHIP OF OPPONENTS AFTER LOSING AMERICAN CUP RACES AGAIN

By Jack Lawrence, I. N. S. Sports Writer

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 19.—Sir Thomas Lipton is steaming out of Brenton's Cove tonight and saying goodbye to the place for perhaps the last time. He is leaving on his line of yacht racing, where anyone should be happy.

But Sir Thomas was anything but happy today. He admitted to your correspondent it was not the fault of his boat nor the crew that manned Shamrock V in the America's cup series that decided the final issue.

He said most significantly: "I think the best boat won this series of races, but I think too, we did not prepare for it sufficiently in advance."

In that sentence he seemed to sum up the America's cup series of 1930. Sir Thomas realized today his challenger was in no way comparable to the defending Enterprise. His crew, while doing its best was slow compared with the action on Enterprise's deck while Shamrock V depended upon handdrawn halyards, these things were worked on Enterprise with modernized winches.

But Sir Thomas proved himself to be a true sportsman to the last, even in the face of the greatest disappointment of his life. He said to your correspondent:

"I think the metal mast which the Enterprise used was the margin of victory over us. Naturally I am very disappointed. Enterprise is a great boat and Harold Vanderbilt is a wonderful sportsman."

"I would like to thank the American public for the fine reception I and my afterguards and crew received here. I don't believe any challenger for the America's cup in time to come will ever be more cordially received than I have been in my last effort to lift it."

"Of course my heart is filled with gratitude for the fine sportsmanship I have met here, not only in this race but in all the others we sailed in American waters in the last three decades. I seem to feel the American people were with me and that gave me a lot of courage."

America to me is my other country. I owe allegiance to the British Empire, but I feel America is equally my home. If God lets me live until I can find another challenger that appeals to me I shall come back again and try once more for the America's cup. "I am saddened, somewhat over the defeat of Shamrock V, but I am not disheartened completely. I think I could still bring across the ocean a ship that will be able to lift the America's cup."

"While I am sorry about the showing Shamrock V made in this series of races, I still feel she is a fast boat. There is no doubt however, that her heavy and solid mast was a handicap. The tall steel and hallow spar in Enterprise was the deciding factor in these races, but this was something we could not anticipate."

Shamrock made a vital mistake when, although she was the leeward boat, she failed to bear in toward Narragansett shore when she was on her original port tack. Harold Vanderbilt, knowing his waters and also his onions, stood in until he was almost in the fishnets that line the beach.

In there he got the benefit of a tide the Shamrock missed when she came about too soon and went off on a starboard tack that took her out to sea. The breeze was offshore, and this, together with the tide, naturally favored the defender when she continued on that long board inshore.

It was this long drill in under the coast that gave Enterprise a huge lead when she rounded the weather mark, and it was the maneuver that won the race.

Had Shamrock held on that port tack and gone down to the Narragansett shore until she was almost upon the beach it seems highly probable she would have been up there with Enterprise at the weather mark. And if she had even been close to the defender at the weather turn the figures prove she would have won with something to spare.

Sophomores Are Secret Of Ohio Gridiron Season

JOSEPH K. RUBENBROD Athens, O., Sept. 19. — The secret of several good-looking Ohio men.

Although there are 16 letters in this season of the Ohio gridiron, Coach Peden and his assistants believe the task of replacing those six all-stars is next to impossible.

The biggest loss was Ray Singer, of Cleveland, quarterback, who was transformed overnight from "just another backfield man" into one of the state's outstanding ball carriers. Another remarkable back was James "Chick" Young, whose mystifying handling of the ball and his plunging through the line was one of the greatest factors in the 1929 team's success.

BRAMMER GONE
The other stars who were lost by graduation of John Brammer, of Marietta, and Clyde Cramer, of Uhrichsville, ends, George Hastings, of Malden, Mass., tackle, and James Papitan, of Cleveland, guard.

A set of dependable endmen is the important need for this team which must defend its championship laurels. There are four candidates for these two positions who saw service last year but none is outstanding. Coach Peden has shifted Marshall, a center, and Rumbaugh, halfback, to the wings in his attempt to develop another great line. Last season's forward wall permitted only 13 points to be scored against the Bobcats in nine games.

Marshall Griffith, 235-pounder, is certain of holding down his old post at tackle. Three other left-termen tackles are battling for the other tackle job. They are Swindell, Coos and Tarzinski.

George Brown, regular pivot man last year, is back at his berth again and will be given ample support by Taraschke.

Ohio is well fortified by guards. Christian, Usilener, Crites and Esmond would make any coach happy. All are high-type linemen.

CENTER STRONG
With this array of experienced material, the center of the line should be just as strong as in 1929. There is some doubt about the flanks but anyone would bet that Peden, a master coach, can develop a couple that will be good.

The schedule opens here with Wilmington college September 27. After that there is Butler university.

Three Aces Held by Harvard

CAPT. BEN TICHNOR, IN. GEORGE DEVENS

Here are three of John Harvard's hopes for the 1930 season, now busily engaged in talking out the kinks in practice sessions at Cambridge, Mass. They are Captain Ben Tichnor, All-American center of last year; Victor Harding, an end of the 1929 squad, and George Devens, a capable looking halfback who also saw service a year ago.

CARDINALS APPEAR IN

Defeat Brooklyn For Third Straight Contest, Teams Concede Pennant.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—With only nine games to play, the National League leaders, St. Louis, today opened a series with the lowly Phillies, while the second place Robins enjoyed a day of rest. Chicago, in third place, opened with the Braves at Boston.

Brooklyn is two games behind the Cardinals and Chicago is two and one-half games in the luck.

The Robins have only seven more games to play and the experts figured this morning only a near-miracle would put the Robins back on the top of the column, while only an outside chance was given the Bruins.

New York, in fourth place, is five and one-half games behind St. Louis and out of the race. The Giants engage Cincinnati here today.

Standings today were:

St. Louis 85 60 .585
Brooklyn 84 63 .571
Chicago 83 63 .568
New York 80 66 .543

The Cardinals sweep of the series with Brooklyn eliminated the Robins in the opinion of some of the experts and yesterday's smacking down of the Cubs by the Giants put a crimp in the chances of Chicago. Pointing out that St. Louis downed Brooklyn three times after the Robins held Chicago to one run in three games, the wise ones said today the superiority of the Cardinals was clearly established and held that it was all over but the shouting.

By downing Chicago, the world champion Athletics won the American League hunting again. The 1929 pennant is the seventh for Manager Connie Mack and gave the Athletics all time honors in titles won. New York and Boston have each won six times.

BUCHAREST, Sept. 19.—Princess Marie, sister of King Carol, is slowly recovering from an acute attack of rheumatism. She has been confined to her apartment at the royal palace for several days with high temperature.

LIPTON LAUDS SPORTSMANSHIP OF OPPONENTS AFTER LOSING AMERICAN CUP RACES AGAIN

By Jack Lawrence, I. N. S. Sports Writer

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 19. — Sir Thomas Lipton is scrambling out of Brenton's Cove tonight and saying goodby to the place for perhaps the last time. He is leaving on his last voyage home, where anyone would be happy.

But Sir Thomas was anything but happy tonight. He admitted to your correspondent it was not the fault of his boat nor the crew that he had lost the American cup series that decided the final issue.

He said the best boat won this series of races, but I think too, we did not prepare for it sufficiently in advance.

In that sentence he seemed to sum up the American cup series of 1930. Sir Thomas realized today his challenger was in no way comparable to the defending Enterprise. His crew, while doing its best was slow compared with the action on Enterprise's deck while Shamrock depended upon handdrawn halyards, these things were worked on Enterprise with modernized winches.

But Sir Thomas proved himself to be a true sportsman to the last, even in the face of the greatest disappointment of his life. He said to your correspondent:

"I think the metal mast which the Enterprise used was the margin of victory over us. Naturally I am very disappointed. Enterprise is a great boat and Harold Vanderbilt is a wonderful sportsman."

"I would like to thank the American public for the fine reception I and my afterguards and crew received here. I don't believe any challenger for the America's cup in time to come will ever be more cordially received than I have been in my last effort to lift it."

"Of course my heart is filled with gratitude for the fine sportsmanship I have met here, not only in this race but in all the others we sailed in American waters in the last three decades. I seem to feel the American people were with me and that gave me a lot of courage."

America to me is my other country. I owe allegiance to the British Empire, but I feel America is equally my home. If God lets me live until I can find another challenger that appeals to me, I shall come back again and try once more for the America's cup.

"I am saddened, somewhat over the defeat of Shamrock V, but I am not disheartened completely. I think I could still bring across the ocean a ship that will be able to lift the America's cup."

"While I am sorry about the showing Shamrock V made in this series of races, I still feel she is a fast boat. There is no doubt, however, that her heavy and solid mast was a handicap. The tall steel and hollow spar in Enterprise was the deciding factor in these races, but this was something we could not anticipate."

Shamrock made a vital mistake when, although she was the leader, she failed to bear in toward Narragansett shore when she was on her original port tack. Harold Vanderbilt, knowing his waters and also his onions, stood in until he was almost in the fishnets that line the beach.

In there he got the benefit of a tide the Shamrock missed when she came about too soon and went off on a starboard tack that took her out to sea. The breeze was offshore, and this together with the tide, naturally favored the defender when she continued on that long board inshore.

It was this long drill in under the coast that gave Enterprise a huge lead when she rounded the weather mark, and it was the maneuver that won the race.

Had Shamrock held on that port tack and gone down to the Narragansett shore until she was almost upon the beach it seems highly probable she would have been up there with Enterprise at the weather mark. And if she had even been close to the defender at the weather turn the figures prove she would have won with something to spare.

PREDICT GAIN

Leaders in the Association confidently predict a gain of 35 to 40 seats for the wets in the House. Republican and Democratic leaders are privately inclined to view this as a fair estimate. Some think it will be larger.

In the present Congress, the wets claimed to have a bloc of nearly 100 votes which they could muster on a given show-down. Because of the conditions arising out of the 1928 election, and the immense Republican majority, this wet strength was considered abnormally. With the off-year swing toward normalcy, if the wets can make good their prediction of picking up some 33 to 40 seats, there appears to be a strong prospect of the 72nd Congress containing a formidable and probably an exceedingly militant wet bloc—by no means approaching a majority, but still strong enough to make things interesting for the dry majority.

Dealers have been asked not to use tobacco while on duty, to keep all unwrapped goods under cover from flies and dust.

Kitchen helpers have been instructed to wear caps or nets, meat cutters to sterilize their equipment, and farmers and dairymen to make more effort to keep barns clean, and to cool milk thoroughly before bottling. Mr. Martin believes the conditions in Pickaway today are about 95 per cent good, the balance is pronounced fair and bad. In two instances orders have been given to discontinue business, if not complied within a limited time.

Orders for the removal of all old "spit boxes," cuspidors etc. were gladly received by some grocery men, but their immediate removal by the proprietors brought forth vociferous remonstrance from some "loafers" present, who expressed their disgust with the inspector and health commissioner, and expressed it as their firm belief that both offices were unadulterated graft.

Scarlet Fever made its appearance in Ashville on the 18th day of this month, followed by another on the 25. These are real severe cases that was probably contracted from an older sister that investigation leads me to think has had a light attack which she probably gathered up, on the public playground while visiting in Columbus. No physician was consulted in the mild case, hence the exposures. Two other families have been shut up because of contact with these cases.

In two instances orders have been given to discontinue business, if not complied within a limited time.

Orders for the removal of all old "spit boxes," cuspidors etc. were gladly received by some grocery men, but their immediate removal by the proprietors brought forth vociferous remonstrance from some "loafers" present, who expressed their disgust with the inspector and health commissioner, and expressed it as their firm belief that both offices were unadulterated graft.

Scarlet Fever made its appearance in Ashville on the 18th day of this month, followed by another on the 25. These are real severe cases that was probably contracted from an older sister that investigation leads me to think has had a light attack which she probably gathered up, on the public playground while visiting in Columbus. No physician was consulted in the mild case, hence the exposures. Two other families have been shut up because of contact with these cases.
